Course Outline:

This course provides students with an introduction to social media as it relates to the history, theories, ethics and practice of communication. Through lectures, online discussion activities, and assignments, students in this class will explore a diverse range of social media forms including blogs, virtual communities, wikis, mobile, and video and photo sharing sites. They will become familiar with basic social media research and analytics programs and understand how social media can be used as part of a strategic communication campaign.

Learning Objectives:

- Students will be able to summarize the history of social media development and the current role social media tools play in the field of communications.
- Students will be able to identify commonly used social media platforms and describe their features.
- Students will be practice responsible, ethical and strategic social media use.
- Students will be able to critically analyze social media communication campaigns to identify best practices.
- Students will demonstrate their mastery of participatory communication through the application of social media tools, theory, and practice in both real world and hypothetical situations.

General Education Statement of Criteria:

This course introduces students to key concepts in social media. Students in this class will study history, development, and theories of social media. In addition to learning about identity performance and community development online, students will study issues of race, gender, sexuality and class in social media. Readings and lectures will introduce students to online communities that form around such topics as politics, health, gaming, and advertising.

Assignment Descriptions:

Ethical Issues in Social Media

Over the last decade there has been a rapid increase in popularity of media that make it easy to create and share content. The ubiquitous nature of these tools make it necessary to examine the multitude of legal and ethical quandaries that arise for social media users. For this assignment you will develop a project that provides advice to college students regarding responsible social media usage.

Social Media Tool Assignment

For this assignment you will produce a multimedia presentation on a social media tool of your choosing. You may work with a partner for this assignment.

Social Media Campaign Critique

For this assignment you will work in teams to identify and critique a social media campaign that pertains to one of the topics we discussed over the course of this term. This project will require students to use social media tools to collaborate on a group project. Although the choice of topic will be up to each team, all projects must refer to theories and practices discussed during the class.

Participation/Discussion Grade

Regular class attendance is a student obligation and will be part of your grade for this course. I will take attendance daily at the beginning of class. Anyone who arrives after attendance is taken will receive half credit for the day. I do understand that things come up, therefore you are allowed to miss two classes without penalty. You may make up work missed due to an absence only if you can provide documented proof of your reason: doctor's note, mechanic bill, funeral notice, etc. If a student misses more than four classes he or she will be advised to withdraw from the course.

Regular contributions to class discussions are a student obligation and will be part of your grade for this course. Some sample discussion topics include notable news stories, learning activity responses, and media thought pieces.

Extra Credit

Extra credit opportunities will be posted on Blackboard if and when they become available.

Technology

Students must be able to access the Blackboard website to participate in this course. The preferred file format for all assignments is Microsoft Word, but Adobe PDFs are also acceptable.
